Adelaide, Australia • £Excellent Salary + Package

Australian Seafood Cooperative Research Centre

Fantastic Opportunity to Live and Work in Beautiful Australia

We are looking for a seafood specialist with broad Product Development experience within a successful seafood company. The successful person will have an interest in research and possess the skills and knowledge to support a new seafood product development and processing initiative in Australia.

The Australian Seafood Cooperative Research Centre (CRC) was established in July 2007 by a group of 29 seafood companies, scientific and industry organisations and the Australian Federal Government. The Industry members represent around 80% of all seafood value in Australia. CRC participants contributed a total of $AUD145 million in cash and in-kind to conduct programs of research, training and market development in seafood over seven years from 2007 – 2014.

A substantial proportion of the CRC activity is directed towards improvement of the post harvest sector. A key delivery vehicle will be the Australian Seafood Productivity Improvement Centre (ASPIC) to be located at the South Australian Food Centre, Adelaide. We have already recruited a nucleus of globally experienced Seafood Technical experts (in Engineering, Packaging, and Product Development), and are looking to strengthen the new team as the project workload grows.

As a qualified food professional, in the field of seafood product and processing Development, you will possess a demonstrable track record in bringing client ideas to market – from concept to shelf. You will operate within a standard commercial framework to deliver safe, innovative, costed, and viable products for clients on a timely basis.

This is a unique opportunity for a person with substantial commercial history and an interest in research to live in Australia for three or more years, to be a key player in ASPIC, and deliver a substantial program of industry transformation.
